Motorization Plans For Army Studied

THE announcement of the policy to be followed in the mechanization of the Cavalry focuses attention on the future of general motorization in the Army. Also of interest is the proposed continuous replacement program of the Quartermaster Corps and the future of motorization in each of the branches.

The general tendency of the Army is toward motorization up to a certain point. Beyond this, it is generally agreed, the motor cannot function properly, and animal transportation must be depended on. This point depends on conditions of terrain, and weather, in so far as they affect terrain. In connection with this point the chief of the Quartermaster Corps, Maj. Gen. J. L. De Witt, previously said: "I think the time is far off when we can eliminate the horse-drawn vehicle from military transportation requirements. There will always be a place where the character of the terrain in any theater of operation will be such that motor transportation cannot be used."

At the present time the Quartermaster Corps is planning to purchase about 285 new vehicles, including those needed by other branches for experimental work. It is hoped next year that the replacement program can be initiated. This depends to a large extent on the amount that can be secured in the appropriations. Under the new program, which is based on seven years, the estimated average life of a truck, some two million dollars a year would be expended for replacements. The motor transportation in use by the Army consists substantially of 12,350 vehicles, of which about 990 are modern, and of the war-time vehicles, 2,849 are unserviceable, and not economically repairable.

Figures prepared by the general staff show that a minimum of 1,112 new vehicles per year would be necessary under the seven year program to effect complete replacement in that period of time. The cost of these would be approximately two million dollars. If any change places the yearly appropriation at a lower figure, then the replacement program will of necessity be extended over a longer period of time.

The Cavalry, before the announcement of the mechanization policy, had planned to have 36 armored cars with each division, five with each regiment. The new mechanized regiment, however, will absorb many of these. The Cavalry is also securing a limited number of four-wheel, four-wheel-drive trucks for test as escort wagons. If satisfactory, these trucks will gradually replace the animal drawn escort wagon in the Cavalry train.

The chief aim of the Field Artillery, it was learned, is to determine by tests the ideal motor transportation, and the best commercial substitute for it. At the present time, however, the Field Artillery has eight motorized 75 battalions; seven 155 battalions; one motorized 155 gun battery; one motorized 240 mm. howitzer battery. The completely motorized regiments are the 8th Field Artillery; the 13th Field Artillery; and the 24th Field Artillery, while the partially motorized regiments are the 5th Field Artillery, the 11th Field Artillery and the 17th Field Artillery.

While the Infantry has only one completely motorized regiment, it is progressing in this direction, mainly along the lines of motorizing field and combat trains. The Infantry, too, it was learned, does not believe that the time has come when the animal-drawn transportation can be completely supplanted by motorized vehicles. At the present time, in addition to the 34th

Military Academy to Turn Out 296 in 1931 Class

West Point, N. Y.—The June Week program at the U. S. Military Academy here, starting on Sunday, June 7, and culminating with the presentation of diplomas and commissions in the Regular Army on Thursday, June 11, to the 296 members of the graduating class, has been announced by Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, Superintendent. The Assistant Secretary of War, Col. Frederick H. Payne, will make the principal address at the exercises on June 11, and will also present the important documents to the graduates. Various military ceremonies, gymnasium exercises, amateur theatricals, cadet hops and alumni meetings have been scheduled for each of the five days.

On Sunday, June 8, the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered in the Cadet Chapel by the Rev. A. B. Kinsolving, Chaplain of the Military Academy. A formal guard mount and regimental parade will be held in the afternoon as well as an organ recital by Mr. F. C. Mayer, organist at the Cadet Chapel.

Monday morning, Maj. H. M. Rayner, Master of the Sword, will be in charge of the gymnasium exercises, when dem-

Assistant Secretary Jahncke Addresses USNA Class

Annapolis, Md., June 5.—Graduation exercises were held at the Naval Academy yesterday, at which 441 members of the first class received diplomas from Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke.

Several thousand relatives and friends of the graduates gathered at Dahlgren Hall for the ceremonies, which climaxed a week of festivities. Among the guests were high ranking officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, as well as several members of Congress. Adm. William V. Pratt, Chief of Naval Operations, and Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, Commandant of the Marine Corps; Senator Phillips Goldsborough of Maryland, and Representative Royal Johnson of South Dakota, whose son was in the graduating class, were present.

Assistant Secretary Jahncke delivered the principal address at the exercises. "Leadership, inspiration, and loyalty are your three cardinal influences," he told the graduates. "If you would be successful in your chosen career of commanding other men, look

Court of Claims Rules On Rental Allowances

ON JUNE 1 the Court of Claims rendered a judgment in favor of Lt. Col. Elias R. Beadle, USMC, in connection with his suit to recover rental allowance which he claimed was due him by reason of the character of his service as chief of the Nicaragua National Guard, while stationed at Managua, Nicaragua.

The Comptroller General had disallowed Colonel Beadle's claim for rental allowance upon the theory that he was on "field duty," that is, he was "serving under orders with troops operating against an enemy actual or potential." The Court of Claims in its opinion took the position that Colonel Beadle was neither serving "with troops" nor was he "operating against an enemy actual or potential." This decision will likely affect approximately 170 marine officers who served either in Nicaragua or China.

A "test" case as to similar service in China is now pending before the Court of Claims. The suit brought by Capt. Robert L. Montague, USMC, is believed to be a stronger case than Colonel Beadle's.

In the findings of fact, the Court ruled there were no public quarters available at Managua during the plaintiff's assignment there, that he rented quarters at his own expense and that no enlisted men were stationed at plaintiff's headquarters other than those who served as clerks, orderlies, and guards, and that the plaintiff's duties in organizing, training, and instructing the Nicaraguan National Guard were administrative in character. He was at no time engaged in combat, and it is not shown that during the period of his service he at any time operated in any expedition or campaign with troops.

On this finding, the Court concludes that Colonel Beadle is entitled to recover rental allowances unless his service be deemed "field duty."

"The test as to whether the plaintiff was on 'field duty' during his service in Nicaragua," the Court stated, "is whether or not he was serving

Promotion of Naval Officers Is Held Up

THE promotion of several hundred naval officers, scheduled for June 4, has been held up pending a decision by the Attorney General as to the authorized number of commissioned officers allowed.

June 4 had been set by the Navy Department as the day to compute the annual redistribution, which determines the number of line officers allowed each grade. The changed percentages set by the new personnel law were to come into effect on that date, and with the influx of new ensigns, a large number of promotions were to take place.

At the time the day was set, however, the department fully expected that the Attorney General would have ruled upon the matter requested, but although several requests have been made that the decision be expedited, he has not yet issued a ruling.

The question put to him was to decide whether the Navy is entitled to count the 14,000 enlisted men attending trade schools as part of the authorized strength of the service in computing the percentage of line officers allowed. The law states that the number of line officers shall be 4 per cent of the authorized strength of the Navy, and as the 14,000 men in trade schools were provided by temporary legislation enacted during the World War, and not repealed, there is doubt whether these men are "part of the authorized strength."

A decision of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, signed by the Secretary of the Navy, holds that these men should be counted, and it generally conceded that as a legal question this stand is correct. Others contend, however, that whatever the wording of the law, it was not the intent of Congress to increase the number of officers, and that any increase should be by specific action of Congress.

Last year the Attorney General was asked to rule upon the point, but declined to do so, stating that there were sufficient vacancies to allow the commissioning of the entire 1930 Naval Academy and that a decision was not

Air Corps Wins Praise For Division's Flight

Congratulations THE WHITE HOUSE Washington

June 2, 1931.

Colonel Patrick J. Hurley,
Secretary of War,
My dear Mr. Secretary:

I wish to congratulate you and the Air Corps on the remarkable success achieved in the maneuvers just terminated.

To have mobilized, from all parts of the country, a force of 672 airplanes and maneuvered it from the middle west to, and along, the eastern seaboard from Maine to Virginia without any serious mishap, is very convincing evidence of the efficiency of the Army's air forces.

I am especially gratified to know that all three components of the Army of the United States—Regular Army, National Guard, and Organized Reserve—participated so creditably in this instruction.

You and your subordinates in the War Department by the successful organization and execution of these exercises, have reflected great credit upon our military establishment.

Faithfully yours,
HERBERT HOOVER.

THE maneuvers of the First Air Division (Prov.) have passed into history, bringing high credit upon the Air Corps and the Army and belying the dire predictions of the pacifists.

Before the maneuvers there were mutterings of protest that the air exercises would be an unwarranted expense to the taxpayers, would endanger the communities over which the Division flew, result in casualties among the participants and accomplish no good.

The first charge, that of added expense to the government, was promptly and vigorously branded as a lie by Assistant Secretary Davison. The entire maneuvers were carried out within the funds allotted and were made possible through a previous curtailment of flying throughout the corps, thus saving the funds to be expended in a much greater training program.

Results disproved the remainder. The record of safety set by the Air Division throughout its maneuvers has excited the admiration of the world and can be attributed only to the previous training of and careful supervision by the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Corps.

The good resulting will be manifold. From it will come numerous lessons—lessons to the designing engineers, lessons to the mechanics, lessons to the tacticians, and lessons to the civilian operators of airports and to those who furnish supplies. From it studies are now being made upon which undoubtedly future training plans will be based.

At the conclusion of the maneuvers there was a strange silence from those who previously were loud in their objections. Instead there was nothing but praise—and that from the highest sources. President Hoover himself sent a letter to Secretary Hurley, which was made public, wherein he said, "You and your subordinates in the War Department by the successful organization and execution of these exercises have reflected great credit upon our military establishment."

Assistant Secretary Davison, and

Maneuvers Of The First Air Division Pronounced Successful By Editors

THE success of the maneuvers of the First Air Division, recently completed, is applauded by the press, and especially the fact that over a million plane-miles were flown without casualty. Editors hold that this demonstration marks a great advance in the science of aviation, and that it will be a stimulus to commercial flying also. There seems to be general agreement that the maneuvers were not a war-like demonstration, but were a necessary training for the air corps against a possible eventuality of war. It was also pointed out that they brought out the necessity of a strong air corps, and that the demonstration of swiftness and devastating potentialities brought home the ugliness of war.

"A WORLD record for aviation was established when the First Air Division of the Army completed its two weeks' maneuver program in Washington without a fatality or a single accident of importance," observes the Washington, D. C., Post (Independent). "That these hundreds of fliers could come together to combine in formation flying for the first time without a crash either in the air or in landing was a testimonial both to their separate unit training and the remarkable advance in the reliability of the machines."

"The record is one that will do much to increase public confidence in air transport. The Army airmen have rendered a signal service to the industry as well as bringing honor to their service that will be recognized in every country as well as at home. With the notable advances made in both commercial and private flying as well as the extensions made in the air mail service, it is but natural that evidences of this development should be reflected in the aircraft industry."

"AT LEAST on the score of efficiency, last week's maneuvers of the airplane division of the Army over several Eastern States deserve high ranking," states the New York Times (Independent Democratic). "To have flown so many planes on so many successive days, under various conditions of weather not always favorable, without a single casualty and, so far as is known, with but one trifling accident, speaks volumes for the training and skill and discipline of our Army airmen. The most difficult evolutions and squadron formations were gone through with perfect success. The whole display in the air merited the final encomium of the Chief of Staff, 'Well done.'"

"A SIMULTANEOUS event was the coming of the great air fleet—a magnificent demonstration of what must be regarded as our chief means of national defense," says the Philadelphia Inquirer (Republican). "We have a small Army, and our Navy, like every other, is more or less at the mercy of attack from the air. The 'sham battles' * * * have shown clearly how an invading force of airplanes could be beaten off. The pacifist outcry against these maneuvers has no basis of reason. Everyone hopes there will not be another war, but we should none the less be prepared to fight if the necessity is forced upon us. The effect of these airplane fleets upon public sentiment cannot fail to be beneficial."

"WHAT THE Army set out to do was to demonstrate the ability of its air force to protect the nation from armed attack," holds the Beaumont, Tex., Enterprise (Democratic). "The War Department has also proved that modern flying is extraordinarily safe, even under trying conditions, when the flyers are expert pilots and the planes they fly are mechanically perfect."

"THOSE WHO hate war most should be glad the army's air force is here," says the Springfield, Mass., Republican (Republican). "In its maneuvers one can visualize instantly, in imagination, the devastation it could wreak on a city. Any child can be taught at a glance what modern war means. How to strip war of its glamor and romance has for ages baffled those who have contended against it merely with weapons of moral propaganda. They can now find aerial reinforcement in driving home the full meaning of war."

"MOREOVER, the demonstration by the great fleet of American-officered planes is proof positive that we have made great progress since the days of the World War, when our propagandists were telling of 'fleets of American airplanes' on the way to the fighting front, when the facts revealed months later that there were only a handful of American machines within the fighting zone, and that our fliers were using French Spads and British scout planes for combat work," notes the Franklin, Pa., News Herald (Republican).

"MILITARIST or pacifist, it cannot help but strike one as the height of folly to seek to bring about a measure of public condemnation of the great air maneuvers held * * * in the Middle-West by the Army on the ground that it is a war-like demonstration which threatens the peace of the world," states the Pottsville, Pa., Republican (Republican).

"We don't want war, but when war does come it must not find us unprepared. That might prove fatal to our national existence."

"THE PURPOSE of the maneuver is for Uncle Sam to try his wings, something he has not done in a large way since the World War," holds the Moline, Ill., Dispatch (Independent Republican). "Strategists of the War Department, analyzing the development of the air forces throughout the world, are convinced that aircraft will have a highly important role, perhaps the major role, in the next war."

"WE CANNOT agree with those who look upon the airplane demonstrations as incentive to the war spirit of our land," says the Stamford, Conn., Advocate (Republican). "True, the maneuvers are staged or skied by the Army, but we regard them as an argument against battleships. We regard them as a hint of the true terror of any future war. We regard them as robbing war of its lure for the pageantry-loving, hero-worshipping public."

"THE AIR SERVICE forms an important part of the national defense," observes the Philadelphia Public Ledger (Independent Republican). "The airplane is adapted much more for defense than for attack. And this is particularly true of the air service of this country. Experts point out that the airplane's aggressiveness is of brief duration. It can attack, but must strike quickly and be on its way. But all fighting forces of this nation are designed for defense, with no thought of aggression. And it is the Government's duty to maintain their full effectiveness, regardless of criticism from clerical or other pacifists who would be better occupied in following its example and attending to their own business."

Praise Air Maneuvers

Brig. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, who commanded the division, also issued statements expressing gratification at the splendid performance of the Division. The press at the conclusion of the maneuvers, too, was virtually 100 per cent in its praise for the Air Corps' accomplishment.

The final phase of the maneuvers on Memorial Day was probably the most impressive (although not so spectacular). It consisted of the entire First Air Division (Prov.) passing in review before the Secretary of War and other government officials who stood on the newly completed Arlington Memorial Bridge which spans the Potomac River from the Lincoln Memorial to Virginia, near the Arlington National Cemetery. President Hoover was unable to be present in the reviewing stand because of a speaking engagement at Valley Forge.

For this phase the pursuit planes were based at Bolling Field, the bombers and some of the observation planes at Langley Field and the attack planes at Logan Field, near Baltimore.

The editor of the Army and Navy Journal took part in this day's activities, flying in a plane of the 90th Attack Squadron ably piloted by 2nd Lt. John E. Sandow, Air Res.

The smoothness of the functioning of the gigantic machinery of the Air Division was a marvel to those who were privileged to fly with it and to see from the air the precision and skill exhibited by the pilots and commanders in assembling and maneuvering the army of the air.

Continuing the interest he had shown throughout the maneuvers, General Douglas MacArthur, the chief of staff, took part in the review, flying in a plane piloted by Capt. Ira Eaker and flown from Bolling Field.

The last week of the maneuvers was an arduous one.

After the maneuvers over New York, the Division winged its way to the New England States and gave a review and demonstration over Boston, where the Chief of Staff, General Douglas MacArthur, arrived by plane to take command of the exercises May 24.

On leaving Boston, the Division, under the command of Brig. Gen. Benjamin Foulois, winged its way back to Long Island, May 26, On May 27 the armada repulsed the mythical foe from the shores of New Jersey that it had defeated at Chicago, at New York and at Boston. At Atlantic City the Division again staged its mass formation and gave a combat demonstration.

May 28 the entire day was devoted to repairs and replacements prior to entering into the final stages of the maneuvers.

One accident occurred in New York; the plane piloted by Lt. A. L. Jewett of Ft. Sill, Omaha, and carrying E. J. Dowling, a newspaper photographer, fell into the river at the foot of 61st St., Brooklyn. Other than a wetting, the occupants of the plane were unhurt. A safe landing might have been made, but Lt. Jewett feared crashing into the crowd gathered to witness the flying.

About 500 persons assembled in Cooper Union Square, New York City, and paraded in protest of the maneuvers May 23. On May 25, Ralph T. O'Neil, National Commander of the American Legion, said at Cleveland, that the Air Corps maneuvers "should receive the enthusiastic support of every patriotic American." He also emphasized their importance from a military standpoint.

An accident occurred May 27 at Curtiss Airport, when Stanley J. Mosinsky, a student pilot there, ground-looped into the parked Boeing fighter of Maj. G. H. Brett, commander of the pursuit wing. There were no injuries but both planes were badly damaged.

Nothing but praise has been offered the Division, General MacArthur has repeatedly expressed his satisfaction, as has Major General Fehet, the Chief of the Air Corps, and Brigadier General Foulois, commander of the Division.

May 29, the Division proceeded to Philadelphia where a review and combat demonstration were held, the head of the column passing over the city at noon. After the conclusion of the review the Division itself proceeded to the Washington area by way of Wilmington and Baltimore.

A typical combat demonstration consisted of (1) attack by bombardment, showing bombing formation; (2) pursuit attack upon bombardment; (3) ground strafing by attack planes; (4) pursuit assault upon attack planes; (5) pursuit formation drill; (6) two-plane pursuit demonstration of "dog-fight" and combat acrobatics, and (7) smoke screen.

onstrations by the entire plebe class, which entered last July, will be given. The exhibition will include boxing, fencing, wrestling, calisthenics and work on apparatus. During the evening the graduating class will hold a dance in the Hotel Thayer on the reservation.

An athletic review with the entire Corps of Cadets in athletic uniforms featuring all the varsity and intramural sports will be held Tuesday morning. At this ceremony the Edgerton Sabre, the Army Athletic Association Sabre and other athletic honors will be presented by General Smith. The captains of the eighteen varsity athletic squads will form as General Smith's staff and receive the review. In the afternoon the graduation ride, a spectacular demonstration of horsemanship, will be given in the Riding Hall by the First Class. Included on the program are various complicated equestrian evolutions and feats of horsemanship. At regimental parade that afternoon the gold stars awarded to cadets in each class for outstanding academic work will be presented. These stars are presented to the men in each class whose academic rating is 92 per cent or better.

Wednesday morning will be devoted to alumni exercises starting at 10:15, with the dedication of memorial windows in the Cadet Chapel. The graduating class will present two handsome windows, one dedicated to the class of 1931 and the other to the class of 1831. Following these ceremonies the alumni and entire Corps of Cadets will form around the statue of Col. Sylvanus Thayer, father of the Military Academy, when special exercises will be held followed by a review of the Corps by the "Old Grads."

At 6 p. m., Wednesday, graduation parade will be held when the entire graduating class of 296 cadets will, after marching on to the parade ground with their companies, march to the front and center in one long line and review the remaining three classes of cadets. As the Corps passes, the graduates uncover and stand at attention. The Superintendent's reception to the graduating class will precede this final parade. In the evening a graduation hop for invited guests will be held in Cullum Hall. At this hop the closing number, "Army Blue," is traditionally reserved for the graduates.

Thursday morning will mark the presentation of diplomas at Battle Monument, where in the presence of distinguished guests and high Army Officers the graduates will make their last official appearance in cadet gray.

first to the example which you yourself set them."

"It is to the Navy that the country must first look for the protection of its interests and the assurance of its safety against foreign aggression," he said at another time. "The officers of the Navy have the high privilege and the great responsibility of keeping this arm of national defense fit and ready."

"The Navy can never be better than the average of the officers who control its destinies. It is, therefore, clearly the duty of each officer to mold his character and to develop his abilities to the best that is in him."

The Superintendent of the Academy, Rear Adm. Thomas C. Hart, also spoke. He highly commended the class for its excellent scholastic attainments and gave advice to the new officers as to shaping their careers.

Of the 441 graduates, commissions were issued to 392 in the Navy and Marine Corps. A total of 357 were commissioned in the line, 24 accepted commissions in the Marine Corps, while 11 became ensigns in the Supply Corps of the Navy. Thirty-six resigned voluntarily to enter business and the resignations of 12 others because of physical disqualifications were accepted. One graduate, Jose Fanesco, of Manila, P. I., was not commissioned. He is to return to Manila to assume an official post.

Graduates who remained in the service were granted a month's leave, after which they will report for duty on the various vessels to which assigned.

With the conclusion of exercises the rush to the marriage altar got under way, with prospects that half a hundred weddings will take place within the next few days. Ten were celebrated at half hour intervals in the Academy Chapel yesterday, Comdr. Frank H. Lash, chaplain, performing all ceremonies; three took place in St. Anne's Episcopal Church, two in St. Mary's Catholic Church, another in Calvary M. E. Church, two more are slated for the Naval Chapel tomorrow, and still others are scheduled in a few days.

... Another proof of BOEING QUALITY!

4,958 flying hours unmarred by accident and distinguished by remarkable aerial maneuvers! That record, set by the skilled pilots of the "Fighting Three," flying 18 Wasp powered Boeing fighters, won the coveted Schiff Memorial Trophy.

600,000 miles in close or open formations . . . 1,500 hours over open seas . . . 861 take-offs from airplane carriers and the same number of landings, 18 planes landing considerably faster than one a minute . . . close wing and tail parade formations . . . dog fighting far aloft . . . 300-mile-an-hour dives from freezing altitudes.

Such performance is ordinary routine for Boeing fighters. For into them—as into every type of Boeing plane, military and commercial—is built stamina for the hardest jobs a plane can tackle.

There is no substitute for Boeing quality.

THE UNITED STATES ARMY

Urges Army Retrenchment

EXPRESSING disappointment that the President's Rapidan conference with Army leaders "failed to suggest possible economies in other directions," Representative Ross A. Collins, Democrat, of Meridian, Miss., has issued a statement in which he advocates reduction in expenditures for the military establishment "consistent with military efficiency and sound business principles."

Representative Collins, who is a member of the Appropriations Committee and the War Policies Commission, repeated his opinions that the officer personnel should be reduced to 7,500 or 8,000 and that the Officers Reserve Corps and the Citizens Military Training Camps should be abolished.

The text of his statement follows:

I am in full sympathy with any move consistent with military efficiency and sound business principles that would result in smaller expenditures for the military establishment.

A mistake was made when the Army housing program was launched in 1927 in not planning for a concentration of military activities in as few places as purely military considerations dictated. Economy and efficiency and common sense should have dictated such a course then more so than now, especially after we had expended or obligated ourselves for approximately $55,000,000. I shall be glad to lend my support to the abandonment of any post, if I am convinced such a course will promote efficiency and economy, but there must be no favoritism shown; no evidence of partisanship.

I must confess disappointment with the much publicized President's Rapidan conference inasmuch as it failed to suggest possible economies in other directions. After all, if the post abandonment plan, in part, contemplates abandonment in the guise of transferring jurisdiction to another Federal agency, the saving to the Treasury and to the taxpayer, the chief objectives, in large part disappears.

As to the form economy measures should take, the commissioned officer strength of the Army should be reduced from 12,000 to 7,500 or 8,000 through staggered enforced attrition. In addition, the Officers' Reserve Corps and the civilian military training activities should be abolished. We should limit ourselves to the Regular Army and the National Guard, continuing the present so-called Reserve Officers' Training Corps, confined to voluntary trainees, as a source of potential officers in time of need.

I should say that a way might be worked out for carrying present combat reserve officers, the younger ones in particular, as extra numbers in National Guard units. Reserve officers in noncombat branches and the Summer camps for free vacations for boys are needless appendages which occasion needless expense. Perhaps, too, the abolition of the Officers' Reserve Corps would be a sure way to avoid "industrializing the Army," as advised by Mr. Baruch during his recent appearance before the War Policies Commission.

In my judgment, what I have suggested with respect to personnel of the regular establishment and of the civilian components offers real, tangible, appreciable savings. Curtailment of the housing program would ensue; there would also be an ultimate annual saving on account of pay and allowances of officers of more than $18,000,000; the large expenses which

USMA Bandsman Retires

West Point, N. Y.—With a record for service which is probably unparalleled in the ranks of the Army, Mr. Sgt. Walter E. Johnson, U. S. Military Academy Band, was retired here this week. Sgt. Johnson is the third generation of his family to finish their military careers at West Point and since 1848, 83 years ago his family has continuously had a representative in the Military Academy Band. Johnson also has a brother who served in the Band for 30 years and retired here in 1922.

When Johnson first enlisted in 1901, the graduating class contained 74 cadets; this year 296 will receive their diplomas. In announcing the retirement, Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, Superintendent, drew the attention of the command to Johnson's excellent record as a non-commissioned officer. During his 30 years' service, he was never absent from duty for a single day and each of his discharges bears character of excellent. Thursday night the Band gave Sgt. Johnson a banquet.

necessitate appropriations for the regular establishment incident to giving training to civil units would be avoided; and finally the appropriations for the Organized Reserves and the CMTC trainees might be dispensed with. For 1932, the latter two appropriations amount to $9,316,000. The large demand upon regular personnel for training civil components has been a constant source of complaint by Army officers, since able officers believe the proper place for them is with regular troops.

I have long felt that economy and efficiency would ensue from a number of administrative changes in the War Department. I believe the Navy's centralized purchasing system is far superior to the Army's procurement procedure, and, without reflecting in any way upon construction quartermasters, I should transfer construction from the Quartermaster to the Engineer Corps.

Concerning the press reports of the plan to mechanize the Cavalry, I have been preaching mechanization throughout my connection with the War Department Appropriation Bill. The hearings my Committee has conducted and the Congressional Record will reveal how I have persistently chided the Army for adhering to old fashioned methods and obsolete equipment. It is gratifying to learn that a change of front is imminent.

QM Subsistence School

Chicago.—The Quartermaster Corps Subsistence School completed its 1930-1931 course of instruction Tuesday, May 26. Graduation exercises were held Wednesday, May 27. Lt. Col. C. L. Corbin, Commandant, in a farewell address, congratulated the students on the high character of their work and wished them success at their new stations. The Corps Area Commander, 6th Corps Area, Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, was introduced by the Commandant and extended his felicitations. An address was made and diplomas were presented to the student officers by Brig. Gen. Henry C. Whitehead, representing The Quartermaster General.

It is believed the school is unique in that it is the only one of its kind in any of the world's military services. It has a course of instruction starting the first Monday in September and closing during the last week in May. During this period a very thorough study is made of all foods used in Army messes. The work is both practical and theoretical, including lectures, laboratory demonstrations, practical grading of foods, visits to food industries, and two motor trips of four days each through canneries, milk condensaries, cheese and dairy establishments. Theoretical instruction is gained largely through the school's own textbooks, written in such a way that they are easily understandable yet sufficiently comprehensive to include a knowledge of all phases of the subjects treated. The school is proud of its associations with commercial food producers and the interest taken in it by various food organizations such as the National Canners' Association, the American Institute of Baking, and other similar outstanding groups.

Classes have always been limited in number, thereby making it possible to give the student the advantage of instruction in small groups. The work is conducted in so thorough a manner that the school has the utmost confidence in the ability of its graduates to carry its teachings properly and intelligently to the service at large.

This organization is the result of many years of careful planning. So far as is known its establishment was first seriously considered in 1901 when General Krauthoff, General Kniskern and General Wilkins made an effort to start an Army Subsistence School. Lack of funds prevented the early realization of their hopes. After this period the matter was under consideration from time to time, but not until 1920 was the first actual operation begun. Through the work of Col. W. H. Point and Col. E. R. Tompkins, the school was started. Its first course was a short one of only a few months and its student body consisted of only two officers. In the following year the course of instruction was extended to twelve months and the student body numbered ten. Subsequently the school year was reduced to nine months and the student body has numbered annually from 10 to 29 members. To date 168 officers, warrant officers and non-commissioned officers have been graduated from the school. Its student body has included officers of the Regular Army.

The experimental stage has been passed long since. Graduates of the school are well qualified as food experts. Originally the school had little or no instruction along the lines of messing of troops as the time required for the study of food quality and grades made it necessary to eliminate instruction in messing. Now, however, the courses have been sufficiently condensed so that approximately one month is available for the operation of an army mess and the study of nutrition. The course so fully covers the field of foodstuffs that it could be advantageously pursued by every officer in the Army.

The staff and faculty of the past and present includes many of those who have contributed valuable information about food to the service. To quote the names of those who served as instructors for extended periods, mention might well be made of Colonel Coleman, Major Littlejohn, Captain Willkie, Major Treuthardt, Captain Koster, Captain Webster, Dr. J. H. White and Mr. Sgt. Tague. Dr. White was one of the first two instructors and is still serving as an instructor. Sgt. Tague, one of the first graduates, is now secretary of the school.

The present staff and faculty is as follows:

Commandant, Lt. Col. C. L. Corbin, QMC.

Asst. Commandant, Maj. J. A. Warden, QMC.

Instructors, Capt. C. J. Blake, QMC; 1st Lt. J. J. Powers, QMC; 1st Lt. E. K. Pettibone, QMC; 1st Lt. W. M. Pickels, QMC; Dr. J. H. White, and Mr. Sgt. A. Tague, QMC.

Officer Commended

SECRETARY of the Navy Charles Francis Adams has sent a letter of commendation to Lieut. Hyman G. Rickover, USN, attached to the submarine USS S-48 for his rescue of an enlisted man from drowning.

On May 7, 1931, at the Submarine Base, Coco Solo, C. Z., Augustin Pasis, mess attendant, 1c, USN, fell overboard from the side of the S-48 when returning from liberty. Lieutenant Rickover went over the side after him and held Pasis' head above water until assistance arrived. The letter states:

"The Department considers your timely assistance in keeping with the highest traditions of the naval service and desires to express its commendation of your action."

Limit Aeroplane Speed Study

EXPERIMENTATION looking toward increased speed in naval aircraft, made possible by an amendment to the 1932 appropriation act, will be confined to motor development, it was learned this week. Research into the design of airplane structure will not be instituted.

The sum of $225,000 added to next year's appropriations by amendment on the floor of the House is not sufficient to allow any extended experimentation with new types of aeroplanes and consequently it has been decided to limit the research to the task of developing an engine of larger horsepower and greater efficiency, it was stated in the Bureau of Aeronautics.

While it is possible that the results of the research may be applicable to racing aircraft, nothing will be done with the funds available toward developing an entrant for the international Schneider Cup races, it was said, as the primary purpose of the study to be made is to improve the performance of strictly service planes.

During the past few years, European nations have forged ahead of the United States in the matter of speed records. In the Schneider Cup races each year the world record has continually mounted, the foreign plane designers being stimulated by the competition to produce faster racing planes. Since the United States dropped out of the races, American speed records have not kept pace with those set in the international races, and have not equaled the speed attained by our planes during the years we competed.

Experimental work by the Navy in recent years, it is said, has been limited by lack of appropriations. The cost of developing new airplane designs and entering a competitor in international racing, is extremely high, and while the speed of service planes depends upon and is the result of experience gained through the construction of racing planes, it has been impossible to do much in this regard with funds available, the Department states.

The speed of service planes of this country compares favorably with those of other armies and navies, it is believed, even though we have fallen behind in the matter of racing aeroplanes.

Detailed plans for the study to be made have not been prepared as yet, other than that it will be carried on largely by the Engine Division of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

War Dept. Mobilization Plan

(This is the third installment of the War Department's mobilization plan, as outlined by General MacArthur before the War Policies Commission.)

III

WE plan to base war-time procurement upon allocation rather than upon the competitive bidding standard properly prescribed in peace. By allocation I mean the assignment of a definite list of facilities to each procurement agency to supply its needs. The Navy Department has given its approval to this plan, and by agreement between both departments those plants set aside to produce for one are not approached by the other. Under joint agreement certain plants will serve both. The advantages offered by this system are many.

a. It is the only method that permits exact pre-arrangement for production of munitions. The aggregate of the production tasks assigned in peace make up the complete initial requirements of the War Department.

b. Orderly distribution of initial war production can be effected in times of peace. Any other system would throw this load haphazardly upon the country in an intensive purchasing campaign when time is at a premium.

c. Each plant is forewarned of the task it will be expected to perform, and can make some preparation to meet it. Essential production can be initiated with the least practicable delay.

d. Competitive bidding among various agencies for the output of a single plant is prevented.

e. Prices will be determined by negotiation, controlled by the knowledge, obtained in peace-time planning, of the items that make up costs and by all information that can be collected by the government. A contractor refusing to take a contract at a fair price would be in a most unenviable position in war. The type of contracts designed to assure fair treatment to all will be described later.

I believe the Commission should give the weight of its approval to the continuance and further development of this system.

Description of Manufacture

Many articles required by the Army in war are not ordinarily produced in this country, and manufacturers have no prior knowledge of the applicable production methods. Complete drawings and specifications are necessary to define any given article to a producer. Experimentation and actual production at government arsenals and laboratories are conducted to develop this information, which, when properly assembled, is called a Description of Manufacture. The results are preserved in the form of models, drawings, and specifications, lists of operations and factory layouts, summary of machines and personnel required, and drawings of necessary jigs, dies, and fixtures.

The importance of this type of preparation was emphasized by Mr. Coffin as well as by Mr. Ferguson. This work is being done as fast as time and funds will permit. It produces, as a valuable by-product, a force of trained mechanics that may be used as government inspectors or as instructors for others in time of war.

Another method through which these same results could be obtained would be through the placing of educational orders, a subject also discussed at length before the Commission by Mr. Coffin. These have not been authorized by Congress, but are most essential for certain technical items.

An educational order is a contract placed, without advertising, for a limited quantity of a desired technical article, with any selected facility. Their use in peace would be of real advantage in hastening production in an emergency. The selected facility would gain actual experience in producing the article that it would be called upon to produce in war. There would be prepared a complete description of manufacture for the use of the United States, and there would be maintained by the plant a complete set of dies, jigs, and fixtures pertaining thereto.

Raw Materials

While the United States is economically the most nearly self-contained of any of the great nations, there are certain of the raw materials whose supply, under circumstances interfering materially with our overseas commerce, would cause us great concern.

Commodity committees have been set up to prepare plans concerning such material. These committees make use of all available data collected by other government departments and open up for themselves private sources of information. The research work of the commodity committees in peace covers the following:

a. Study of the supply of the material in the World War and the difficulties encountered.

b. Collection of statistics on the use of the material by industry and the possibility of reducing the industrial requirements in war.

c. Collection of the Military, naval, and civilian requirements and comparison with the domestic production and sources and amounts of the imports and exports.

There are several constructive steps to be taken to increase the availability of a critical raw material in war. Among the things the Army can do and is doing are:

a. Make the maximum use of acceptable substitutes for the critical material in preparing specifications for essential munitions.

b. Keep in touch with all developments in the United States that promise to make available new sources of supply.

c. Prepare plans for a drastic conservation program to be instituted and executed under the direction of the President in war.

Contract Forms

During the World War the cost-plus and cost-plus percentage contracts for major construction projects and for the manufacture of large quantities of non-commercial supplies were widely used. The use of such contracts was accom-

MC Officers Selected

THE President has approved the recommendations of a selection board which recommended for promotions to the rank of rear admiral, Medical Corps, USN, Capt. James Farquharson Leys, MC, USN, and Capt. Charles Poor Kindleberger, MC, USN.

Captain Leys will be promoted July 1, upon the retirement of Rear Adm. Robert M. Kennedy. He will have only six months to serve in his new rank, as he retires for age January 1, 1932.

He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., December 26, 1867, and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School in 1890. He was appointed Assistant Surgeon in the Medical Corps of the Navy in 1893. Captain Leys has served as Fleet Surgeon of the Atlantic Fleet, as Senior Medical Officer of the Navy Yard, Boston; in command of the Naval Hospitals, Newport, R. I., and Boston, Mass., and is at present on duty as senior medical officer of the Navy Yard, New York.

Captain Kindleberger will fill the vacancy resulting from the retirement of Rear Adm. Edward R. Stitt on August 1. The former was born November 1, 1870, in San Francisco. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School in 1894. He was commissioned an Assistant Surgeon in the Medical Corps of the Navy in 1894. He has served as Fleet Surgeon of the Atlantic Fleet, as senior medical officer at the U. S. Naval Academy, in command of the naval hospitals at Pelham Park, N. Y., Pearl Harbor, T. H.; Puget Sound, Wash.; Mare Island, Cal.; Great Lakes, Ill., and is at present on duty at the Navy Retiring Board and Naval Examining Board, Washington, D. C.

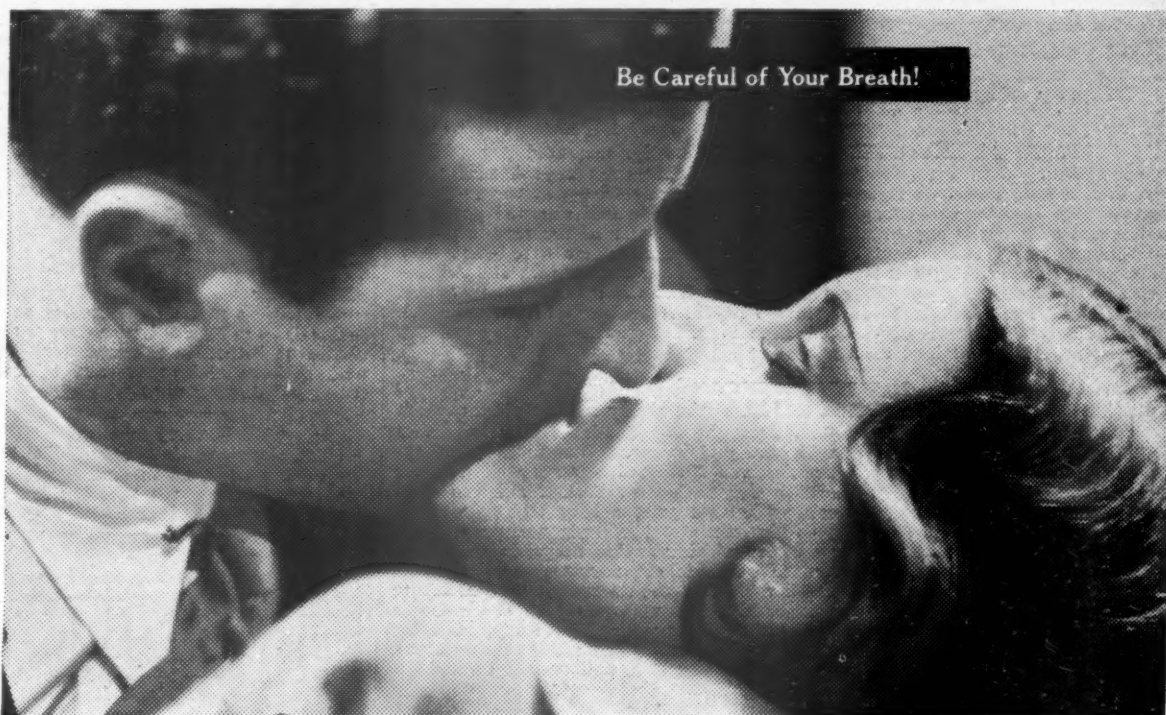

(To Be Continued Next Week)

Engineering Chief Relieved

CAPT. SAMUEL M. ROBINSON, USN, took up his duties as Engineer in Chief of the Navy and Chief of Engineering, Navy Department, with the rank of rear admiral, relieving Rear Adm. H. E. Yarnell, USN, who has been ordered to duty as Commander Aircraft, Battle Force. Adm. Yarnell left Washington with his family for the West Coast, traveling by automobile.

He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., December 26, 1867, and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School in 1890. He was appointed Assistant Surgeon in the Medical Corps of the Navy in 1893. Captain Leys has served as Fleet Surgeon of the Atlantic Fleet, as Senior Medical Officer of the Navy Yard, Boston; in command of the Naval Hos-hospitals, Newport, R. I., and Boston, Mass., and is at present on duty as senior medical officer of the Navy Yard, New York.

Be Careful of Your Breath!

Discovered! Pepsodent Mouth Wash checks bad breath longer than leading mouth antiseptics!!

3 to 11* times more powerful in killing germs!!!

THIS remarkable discovery is a new and powerful weapon in fighting germs. It combats, immediately, the social evil of bad breath.

The formula comes from the Pepsodent tooth paste laboratories, whose contribution to dental hygiene has won high recognition. Under the label of Pepsodent Antiseptic Mouth Wash it is being widely distributed in the public interest.

Cleanses—purifies the mouth

The active agent used in Pepsodent Mouth Wash, as determined by standard tests, is many times more potent than pure carbolic acid, for all time the standard germicide. Pepsodent Mouth Wash is non-poisonous, safe and soothing.

Immediately after you use it, 95% of the germs in the mouth are destroyed. Their number is still reduced 70% at the end of two hours' time—that is far longer acting than many other leading mouth washes.

"We find," states one laboratory, "Pepsodent Mouth Wash kills the stubborn pus-producing germs (M. Aureus) in the fastest time it is possible for science to record—we believe faster than has previously been the standard for other leading mouth washes."

Checks bad breath

With this revolutionary discovery comes a social safeguard: remarkable protection against offensive breath. A laboratory director states: "Tests prove conclusively that Pepsodent Mouth Wash overcomes bad breath 1 to 2 hours longer than many other leading antiseptic mouth washes."

At your druggist's—today

Your druggist has just received this new discovery. Go today and get a bottle. Secure this added protection to your family's health plus the greater assurance of a pure, sweet breath.

Consult your Dentist, Physician

In the opinion of some authorities, most breath odors come from such minor causes as neglected, unclean mouth, tooth decay, slight infections of nose and throat, excessive smoking. If, after using Pepsodent Mouth Wash, bad breath persists in returning, seek medical and dental advice to remove the cause.

*Pepsodent Mouth Wash is highly antiseptic when diluted with several parts of water. Hence, it goes many times as far as many mouth washes which must be used FULL STRENGTH to be effective.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1931

"If Army and Navy pay is compared with pay received in other walks of life, it is evident that the present scale is not only inadequate and inefficient, but also unjust."—LITERARY DIGEST.

AT THE NAVAL CONFERENCE, which is occurring at Rapidan this week end, we hope the President will keep in mind his assurance to the people that the London disarmament Treaty was intended to produce parity for the United States. If so, the question to be discussed cannot be reduction, but a substantial increase in our cruiser and airplane strength. An aspect of such construction, which merits consideration, is the employment it would provide. We assume the conference will announce as a means of saving the disposition of unnecessary navy yards; but, as in the case of out-of-date military reservations, Congressional politics will be the final arbiter, and we rather anticipate that the program submitted both for the Army and the Navy in this respect will be largely disregarded.

IT IS NOT TO BE EXPECTED that the proposal for increased pay will be considered. With the government deficit growing even beyond that forecast even a month ago, no member of the Cabinet would suggest to the President an augmentation of the service wage. He would be told that the reduction in the cost of living is appreciating the purchasing power of the service dollar. The answer, of course, is that living costs are not anywhere near what they were in 1908, when the present pay schedules were put into force. The Administration is strenuously upholding the principle that the labor scale must not be modified. That scale is based upon the higher living costs of our time. It would be only fair for the service schedules to be brought to the comparatively same levels, and maintained there.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S APPRECIATION of the highly successful maneuvers of the Army was a graceful tribute from the Commander-in-Chief, not only to the officers and men, who flew with skill and judgment, but to the administration of the Army, including, especially, the Assistant Secretary of War for Air, Mr. Davison, the Chief of the Air Corps, General Fochet, and the commander of the force, General Foulis. We have gone a long way from 1926, when Colonel Mitchell precipitated at his own cost the controversy which resulted in the enactment of the law under which the Air Corps is operating. Part of the credit is due, of course, to our patriotic manufacturers, such as Boeing, whose cooperation with the Service has been marked by considerate understanding. There have been rumors that in connection with the economy program estimates for the Air Corps of the Army and the Navy, both for personnel and materiel, will be slashed. We sincerely trust the President will show that these rumors are unfounded, for an adequate, well trained air defense is essential for the national safety.

THERE IS DUBIOUS SATISFACTION in pacifist circles over General MacArthur's reply to the pacifist preachers, which we reprint in our news columns. Admittedly, it was forceful and dignified, and will appeal to the right thinking citizen. Therefore, it was timely. However, pacifism lives on controversy. Every one of the preachers who declared he would not bear arms in time of war will feel called upon to deliver a sermon in defense of his attitude, and the War Department will hear from fanatics in no uncertain terms. In fairness to National Defense and to General MacArthur, we urge the preachers to read the Chief of Staff's views to their congregations. Then there would be no question as to the popular attitude. In our judgment, General MacArthur's comments are unanswerable.

IT SEEMS TO BE A SET PROGRAM for our Secretaries of State to make visits to foreign nations. The usual announcement is that they plan to take their vacations abroad, and this carries with it the implication that they will not discuss pending questions with the foreign officials they happen to meet. Observing the procedure of his immediate predecessors, Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Hughes, Secretary Stimson proposes to spend four months in Europe. We admit the Summer is a good time to be away from Washington. Then, too, plans must be made for the Disarmament Conference next Winter. Mr. Stimson has been having lengthy conferences with Messrs. Gibson and Dawes, Ambassadors to Belgium and Great Britain, respectively, who will be among our representatives at the conference. It is naturally desirable to predetermine the program, and this, we suspect, is one of the important objects of Mr. Stimson's trip. We understand the Secretary deprecates the appreciative compliments he has been receiving from pacifists. He can best show his real conviction, if it be for adequate defense, by standing up for American necessities during his forthcoming tour.

WE ARE NOT SURPRISED at the criticism evoked by the disclosure of the purchase of matches of Russian production for the Army. The criticism, however, is misdirected. Rather should it be directed against the law and the interpretation thereof under which the War Department felt that it must assign the contract to the lowest bidder, in this case a firm of Soviet origin. Everyone rails a great deal at Congress, but that body gives frequent evidence of wisdom. It enacted at the last session a provision requiring the War Department to buy materials of the growth, production or manufacture of the United States, except when otherwise specified by the Secretary of War. This means that Russian offers will be disregarded after June 30, and Americans will get the business, as they ought to do. The Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps are a fertile field for supply, especially of brand products; and creation of demand at each local post or station or ship results in the purchase of the brand specified. This is as it should be.

Service Humor

Attention Pacifists

Newspapers carried the account of the frightening to death of a heifer by the noise of the passage of the planes participating in the recent maneuvers. There's evidence for the pacifists that the maneuvers were harmful!

No Osculation

George Rothwell Brown, in the Washington Herald says, "All official kissing between pretty girls and Mid-dies will be abolished at Annapolis during 'June Week,' and the tough break about it is, how can a graduate who has just become an officer, kiss unofficially?"

Fear Not

A certain newspaper, speaking of the mechanization of Cavalry, conjures up the picture of a future parade at West Point where the cadets are accompanied by trucks. Not so, say we, the cadets will probably be riding in the trucks!

Cure-all

There are always wags at a party who insist on making themselves general nuisances by cutting capers. They should be locked in a closet (empty) with scissors and paper—and told to cut-up all they want to.

We Hate to Repeat

Upon observing the windmill-like rotor of the autogiro in action, a lady was heard to ask, "Is that big fan to keep the pilot cool?"

Question Department

Dear Question Editor: Do Army officers make good husbands?—Laura.
Dear Laura: Yes, and they also make single men be good if they find them hanging around their wives.

We're Neutral

A vaudeville act on a Washington stage presents this quip:

Q. "Why do so many marriages go on the rocks?"

A. "That's the best place to go, so they'll have plenty of missiles to throw!"

Capone at Sea

Let other navies tag their ships with awe-inspiring cognomens such as "Dauntless," "Scorpion" and "Terror." The U. S. Navy simply christens our newest cruiser "Chicago" and lets it go at that.—Chicago Daily News.

Naught-ical Terms

A seaman second class, recently studying his Bluejacket's Manual aboard ship in order to prepare for an examination for the rating of seaman first class, was asked by his instructor to define certain nautical terms.

Here are his answers:

Capstan—The commanding officer.

Gaff—Ship small talk.

Scupper—A utensil used for drinking; hence the expression a scupper of coffee.

Hatch—A box where eggs are kept.

Halyards—A nautical name for impishly-inclined sailors.

Tiller—Officer in charge of the payroll, sometimes called the paying tiller.

Tack—To handle the boat diplomatically.

Binnacle—A bivalve that fastens itself to the bottom.

Sextant—One who officiates at funerals at sea.

The youngster was not given an opportunity to take his examination.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Open Bids for Construction of Christie-type Tanks.—Bids for the construction of tanks of the Christie convertible wheel-track type were opened in the office of the Chief of Ordnance, June 4. Only two bids were received, one from the U. S. Wheel Track Layer Corporation, of which Mr. J. Walter Christie, the inventor, is president and the other from Mr. Nicholas Straussler, a consulting engineer of London, England.

Mr. Christie's bids were as follows: Two tanks with armor, $118,000; two without armor, $108,000; three with armor, $171,000; three without armor, $156,000; four with armor, $208,000; four without armor, $188,000; five with armor, $235,000; five without armor, $210,000; six with armor, $252,000; six without armor, $222,000; seven with armor, $276,500 and seven without armor, $241,500.

Mr. Straussler's bids were as follows: Seven tank chassis, 21,000 pounds (approximately $101,850); armoring for seven tank chassis, 17,500 pounds (approximately $84,875); one tank chassis, 3,000 pounds (approximately $14,550); armoring for one tank chassis, 2,500 pounds (approximately $12,125).

No announcement has yet been made as to which of the bidders will be awarded the contract to build the vehicles. The plans submitted by Mr. Straussler, while embodying the Christie principles, vary somewhat from the original Christie and are now being studied by the Ordnance engineers.

Mr. Straussler's bids are considerably lower than Mr. Christie's. Should he be awarded the contract it would be necessary for him to manufacture the vehicles in this country, for the War Department's license under the Christie patents extends only to the United States. Mr. Straussler is a widely known engineer in England, where his services as a consulting engineer have been utilized by the famed Vickers company. He has previously done work for the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army.

Signal Corps School Students in Maneuvers.—The Signal Corps student officers in the Signal School at Ft. Monmouth are taking an active part in the Army War College exercises now in progress at Ft. DuPont, Dela. The students are acting in the capacity of Division, Corps and Army Signal Officers, while members of the Signal School faculty are assistants to the War College Umpires.

In addition, the Signal Corps has a detachment of 60 enlisted men at Ft. DuPont for the purpose of furnishing messengers and message center service to all units taking part in the exercises. A portable field radio station has been installed at Ft. DuPont and hourly schedules are maintained between Ft. DuPont and Ft. Monmouth and also between Ft. DuPont and Bolling Field.

This station furnished both official and personal service to the War College students and faculty, as well as to the officers of the various service schools participating in the exercise.

The Signal School personnel have installed three 40-line telephone switchboards for the use of the War College. One of these switchboards furnishes service to the Red Army, one to the Blue Army and one to the umpires. They are so installed that intercommunication between the umpires and either of the opposing armies is possible, but communication is not furnished between the Reds and Blues. There are also trunk lines between the switchboards installed for the use of the War College and the permanently installed telephone system that serves Ft. DuPont.

An unusual innovation this year is the installation of field telegraph printers in the headquarters of the opposing armies at these exercises. The installation and operation of these instruments has been accomplished by personnel from The Signal School.

Pay and Promotion.—So far, there seems to be no indication that the attitude of the War Department on its proposed promotion reform legislation will change one whit as the result of the renewed economy wave. True, enactment of the measure would increase the Army's pay budget by approximately $1,500,000. However, there seems to be a general disposition among Army leaders to pare elsewhere on the budget rather than refrain from pushing the promotion measure.

Meanwhile, the tendency in some quarters of the Army to cast disparagement upon the MacArthur bill seems to be abating. Letters coming to the Army and Navy Journal from the field have a more favorable attitude toward the measure than those which were written at the time of the original announcement. It may be that this increase of favor is due to an increased appreciation of the bill brought about by study and discussion. Or it is possible that it is the result of a realization that controversy will kill the possibility of promotion reform just as surely as it has killed such possibilities before.

The objections that have come forth are from those who see relief only in a revision of the promotion list and from those who fear that the bill is planned to benefit principally those officers in the upper grades. In regard to the first objectors, it is pointed out that the bill makes no pretense of dealing with the justice or injustice of the original arrangement of the promotion list. That subject is left entirely to itself, for those who wrote the bill aimed merely to accelerate promotion "as is" and not to attempt to deal with what has been the acme of controversial subjects. It is said that the bill would actually spur promotion by from five to eight years, with the greatest acceleration going to those lowest on the promotion list. Through this bill, they aver, many officers, particularly the so-called "overage" officers, will attain a higher grade before retirement than they had any reason to expect when they were originally placed on the promotion list. Furthermore, they say, the plan does not in any way preclude revision as such action is deemed advisable in the future.

Numerous requests have been received as to the future prospects under the bill of the junior captains and senior lieutenants of world war origin. This prediction would necessarily be conjectural, for it would involve a forecast of what particular officers, starred or unstarred, will pass from the promotion list year by year in the future. As an example of the effect on an overaged officer, it was computed that an officer whose place on the promotion list is approximately 200 down from the top of the first lieutenants and who is about 12 years overage, will, under the MacArthur bill, attain the grade of major in time to serve a number of years therein. Under the present conditions, it is said, it is very unlikely that he will be able to reach field grade before retirement.

In response to the expression of fear that the bill is drafted to aid the officers in the upper grades, it is pointed out that the greatest acceleration in promotion is given to those in the lowest grades, the years saved in promotion under the bill tapering off as the grades go up. Strange to say, there has been some objection from officers already in the upper grades that the bill would increase the number of field officers and that there would not be enough posts under the present conditions to give them all commensurate assignments. This is promptly denied, for it is asserted that there are many posts now rating higher officers which are filled by officers of lesser rank because there are not enough others to fill them. In this connection it is interesting to recall the statement of General Pershing some years ago before a Congressional committee where he said in effect that peace-time promotion should not be based upon organizational requirements.

Mounting deficits, the tightening of the clamp of economy on governmental expenditures, bond issues, the prospects of increased taxation and the pending Presidential campaign all play their part toward giving a depressing outlook as far as a revision of the pay schedules is concerned. There are sparks of hope here and there, nevertheless. The War Department and Navy Department attitude toward the movement is favorable. Men like Senator Brookhart are becoming interested. Congress will make an effort to show that it will do its part toward maintaining the American standard of living.

The Retired Officers' Association, of which Col. A. T. Marix, USMC-Ret., is president, has collected some splendid data anent the pay situation among the retired officers. This association has been doing admirable work for its membership as well as for the uniformed services as a whole, and the data it is collecting will undoubtedly be of high value when Congress takes up consideration of service pay.

Some of the facts collected by the Retired Officers' Association are summarized as follows:

"The answers from 837 retired officers of the military services to a questionnaire show:

"Average expenses: House rent $65.43, food $77.87, fuel $15.33, light $5.22, medical service $7.73, medicines $9.27, dentist $8.62. The above items leave little for clothing, taxes, education, recreation, or amusements. We find that 50 per cent have liabilities in excess of assets, and amounts saved over expense, nothing. Pension for widow $30; dependent children $6 per month. Above pensions only if Spanish-American War Veterans or death incident to the service.

"Of 37 per cent of officers retired for other causes than battle wounds or disabilities in line of duty, a vast majority were retired for age. These officers and nearly all retired officers cannot hope for employment in civil life. They are too old or too sick. Older retired officers are apt to need physician's care. Most of them cannot afford to live in the larger cities where there are Government hospitals. The average of insurance carried by retired officers for dependents is $10,175.61, which is deplorably insufficient and is usually fully mortgaged. Sixty-three per cent were retired for wounds or disabilities incurred in battle or line of duty.

"Domestic servants are almost unknown for retired officers (as also for junior officers on active list). About 11.5 per cent can afford a monthly saving, and that is $4.77 on the average.

"Congress intended to give retired officers 75 per cent (three-quarters) of their full pay on retirement, if of 30 years' service or retired for physical disabilities. Decisions give them only about 58 per cent (many much less) as the allowances have not been counted as pay, though they actually are.

"With such a prospect on retirement, active service morale must suffer. Cannot keep the best officers unless they have private means. Large numbers have been and still are resigning from the active list. There is little inducement to enter the services; poor pay and small hope of promotion, or providing for modest comfort of your family upon retirement."

Army Chaplains' Notes.—It is expected that the new chapel in process of erection at the Presidio of San Francisco, will be ready for dedication this month. The Governor of California made the principal address at the ceremony of laying of the cornerstone. Ch. George F. Rixey is on duty at the Presidio.

Ch. A. C. Oliver, Jr., stationed with the 15th Infantry in Tientsin, China, conducted a Sunday service recently on the Great Wall of China. He was assisted by Ch. Harry C. Fraser, who was touring China on leave previous to reporting for permanent duty at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

When the Second Division at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., was on maneuvers recently Chaplain Cohoe held a Field Service in beautiful Landa's Park at New Braunfels, upon which occasion all the Division colors and guidons were massed with the entire Division in attendance upon the service.

Replying to a letter of congratulation upon his recent elevation to the office of Surgeon General, Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson wrote as follows: "Thank you for your kind note of the 16th. You may be sure that cordial relationship between our departments will be continued while I am in office. Medicine and the church are very close together as you know. When we have done our worst the church does its best. I think you know I am one of those who belong to a church and believe in it."

Officers of the Chaplain Corps will be interested in the following statement issued to all Corps Area and Department Commanders from the Adjutant General's Office under date of May 15: "When reserve chaplains are called for the customary fourteen-day period of active duty training, the tour will begin, normally, on some other day other than Sunday—preferably Wednesday. Since chaplains' activities center ordinarily around the Sunday program, it is decidedly to the advantage of all trainees that chaplains spend two Sundays at the station where they may be ordered for training."

Air Maneuvers Furnish Index to Present Conditions.—The operations of the First Air Division, recently completed, show plainly the present conditions in regard to the feasibility of such mass movement, use of commercial airports as auxiliary fields, and excellence of training in Army flying, as well as the value of experience.

The Division flew more than 31,500 plane hours and covered a distance of more than 3,250,000 miles. In this remarkable flight there were no serious accidents, while studies made previously had indicated that at least two deaths would occur and possibly more. This in itself is a direct tribute to the excellence of the Army training, and to the skill and experience of the leaders of the Division. Careful supervision of all operations is credited with having reduced the hazards so noticeably.

Military demands on the commercial airports of the East were met very satisfactorily despite the fact that they were strained with the handling of such large numbers of planes. Airport operators and managers were given a clear picture of the servicing problems they must face in event of an emergency while the Air Corps was able to judge the ability of these organizations to care for large numbers of planes.

Weather, it was learned, actually kept the Division on the ground for one day. It was grounded and delayed at other times, but for safety rather than impossibility of flight. Only four pilots were injured and these not seriously. Three planes were damaged beyond repair.

Navy Goes to Economy Conference.—With published reports quoting Secretary Adams as saying that the Navy could effect no further economies branded as erroneous, Navy Department officials are to leave today for a conference with President Hoover at his Rapidan Camp. In an article appearing in a number of newspapers on Thursday, Secretary Adams was quoted as stating that he did not see where any worthwhile economies could be effected in the Navy. Following the publication of this statement it was stated at the Navy Department that the story was in error, and that although Secretary Adams had been interviewed on Wednesday, he had not said anything for publication. The White House, irked at the report, issued the following statement:

"Some newspapers have published dispatches that the Navy will not cooperate with other departments of the Government and the President, in reducing expenditures. Secretary Adams has made no such statement. On the contrary, the Navy is cooperating and will cooperate. The department will do its full part in connection with others in carrying out the economy program."

Aside from the inferences which have been drawn from this episode, it appears that the Navy Department officials are leaving for the Rapidan camp without any definite curtailment plan. The Navy bore the brunt of last year's economy plan and was pushed aside during the last Congress in the matter of the building program. Therefore they are of the view that economies can only be made at the expense of reducing efficiency. However, in a spirit of cooperation and obedience to orders, tentative plans have been drawn up. One of these, it is said, proposes to decommission six destroyers, six submarines and several auxiliaries, and to dispose of the battleship Wyoming, which is planned for a training ship. Under the plan, a number of recruiting stations would be abandoned and following the lead of the Army, several shore stations would be proposed for abandonment. This plan has not yet received the approval of Secretary Adams, it is understood and will not be carried into effect, unless the Administration absolutely demands it. The party which will go to the Rapidan camp includes the following: Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Adams; Hugh S. Gibson, Ambassador to Belgium; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahnce; Assistant Secretary of the Navy (for air) Ingalls; Adm. William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, and Mrs. Pratt; Maj. Gen. Ben. H. Fuller, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Fuller; Rear Adm. Ridley McLean, budget officer of the Navy, and Mrs. McLean; Rear Adm. A. L. Parsons, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and Mrs. Parsons; Capt. Charles R. Train, naval aide to the President, and Mrs. Train; Representative Robert G. Simmons (Rep., Neb.), member of the Appropriations Committee, and Mrs. Simmons; Lawrence Richey, secretary to President Hoover; Capt. Joel T. Boone, personal physician.

Adm. Moffett Rebukes Legion.—Criticism of the American Legion for "doing too much for its members and not enough for national defense" was made by Rear Adm. William A. Moffett, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, in an address at Passaic, N. J., on Memorial Day.

Declaring that he spoke as a legionnaire, Admiral Moffett declared in his speech that "he would like to say something to the members of the American Legion."

"I would remind you that the object and mission of the Legion is, first, service to the country and not to the Legion," he said. "There is being appropriated for war veterans, directly and indirectly, about a billion dollars a year, a stupendous sum. This money is furnished by all American taxpayers."

"I believe the point has been reached where the public is wondering whether they are not being imposed upon, and that the legion is being criticized for doing too much for its members and not enough for national defense. Adjusted compensations passed the last Congress, but the Navy's first year London treaty building program did not."

Pointing out that this country's expenses "were over $1,000,000 per hour" during the World War, Admiral Moffett said later: "It is safe to say that a large portion was wasted because we were not prepared. Are we again riding for a greater fall if another conflict comes?" At another point in his address the Admiral said: "The world depression is the result of the war. The taxes you are paying is the result of the war. The billion going to the veterans yearly is the result of the war. What will happen if we have another?" He concluded his plea for preparedness with the question, "Have you ever stopped to consider what it would cost if we lost a war?"

Foreign Tanks and Tractors Secured for Test.—A contract has been made with the Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd., of London, England, for a 30-day demonstration and test of one of their latest model Vickers light tanks built on the Carden-Lloyd principle. This machine has a weight of about 7½ tons, and a speed of about 18 miles per hour. It is, in general, similar to the light tank T1E3 and the tests should, therefore, give interesting comparison data as to the relative merits of the British and American light tanks. It is expected that this vehicle will be delivered to Aberdeen Proving Ground soon.

The Andre Citroen-Kegresse Co., of Paris, France, has delivered to the Military Attache in Paris, for shipment to the United States, one Citroen-Kegresse P-14 tractor for divisional artillery. This vehicle is equipped with the Kegresse type of half track on the rear. It is being purchased for test at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., by the Field Artillery as a light tractor having both tactical and strategic mobility.

The test of the Medium Tank, T2, is being continued at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. This tank has been found to be very reliable and to have a better general all-around performance than the tanks previously built by the Ordnance Department. This tank was used May 4 for an extensive demonstration before the 1st Class of the U. S. Military Academy.

The manufacture of the pilot Convertible Armored Car, T5, at the Rock Island Arsenal is now about four-fifths completed. The special engine for this tank is expected to be delivered soon.

The Light Tank, T1E3, has been delivered to the Mechanized Force. Indications to date are that this vehicle is a considerable improvement over the Light Tank, T1E1, particularly in the matter of meeting the tactical requirements of the Infantry.

Joint Coast Defense Maneuvers Basis for Future Training.—The recent maneuvers of the Coast Artillery in defense of the Chesapeake Bay, with the Navy cooperating, constituted a communication, command and intelligence test, on the basis of which the training for the next year will be designed.

Five phases were staged and each branch was assumed to revert to its original strength at the end of each phase. Maj. J. P. Smith, executive officer, said: "The tests proved that we could pick up approaching enemy ships far at sea, and that we could keep them under constant surveillance, divert their attention and otherwise confuse them while our own coast defenses were being prepared to go into action when the invaders came within firing distance."

This opinion was approved by Brig. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, in command of the land forces, and Rear Adm. O. G. Murfin, in command of the naval forces, Col. Roy Kirtland, commanding Langley Field, and staff officers who acted as umpires.

Even at night, airplane observation proved successful, the planes dropping flares over the "enemy" ships and reporting their position by radio. Another development that proved its value were the radio compasses placed at Ft. Story and Virginia Beach. These proved their ability to locate the enemy at sea, according to reports.

Smoke screens and simulated mine-sweeping were employed by the "attacking" fleet in its efforts to penetrate the defenses. Studies and critiques based on the various phases of the maneuvers after they have been properly evaluated, will be used in future training.

Test Firing of New Eight-Inch Howitzer.—On June 8, Maj. Gen. H. G. Bishop, accompanied by Maj. Waldron, will go to Aberdeen Proving Ground to witness the firing of the latest model 8-inch Howitzer. This model is called the T-2, and the carriage is built for either the 8-inch Howitzer or the 155-mm. gun. The 8-inch Howitzer, T-2, embodies the latest ideas in artillery construction and is equipped with dual balloon tires. There are eight balloon tires supporting the gun and its carriage and a bogie with two other balloon tires supporting the end of the trail, enabling it to travel 45 miles per hour on the road. It can go into position for firing very quickly since all that is necessary is to remove the bogie from under the end of the trail and lower the carriage to the ground so that no weight will rest on the tires. It has already done some firing at Savannah, near Rock Island Arsenal.

At Aberdeen General Bishop will also witness the tests of the Citroen-Kegresse tractor which will be tested pulling a French 75-mm. gun on a bogie across country and up steep slopes. In addition there will be a demonstration of Ford truck equipped with Hipkins plates on its tires for cross-country work.

On June 9, General Bishop will go to Ft. Sill, Okla., for the graduation at the Field Artillery School.

USS Dobbin as Flagship.—For the first time in the history of the Navy a Destroyer Tender will become the flagship of the Naval Force operating in the Atlantic, when about June 10 at Newport, Vice Adm. Arthur L. Willard, USN, Commander Scouting Force, will transfer his flag to that unit from the USS Augusta. The Dobbin is one of the new Destroyer Tenders, built at Navy Yard, Philadelphia, and commissioned in 1926. She is 8,000 tons, 16 knots. She is tender for Destroyer Squadron Three, of which Capt. William F. Halsey, jr., USN, is in command. The ship is commanded by Capt. Roscoe C. MacFall, USN; her Executive Officer, Comdr. S. S. Payne, USN.

Gen. Munson to Command Medical Field Service School.—Brig. Gen. Edward L. Munson, assistant to the Surgeon General, has received orders relieving him from duty at the Presidio of San Francisco, about Aug. 5, and assigning him to the command of the Medical Field Service School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. Col. Charles R. Reynolds, who was mentioned prominently for the position of Surgeon General, now commandant of the school, will be ordered to Headquarters, 2nd Corps Area, to relieve Col. Thomas L. Rhoads, who retires June 30.

Pepsodent
—the special film-removing tooth paste

Pepsodent—a supreme achievement
The scientific purpose of Pepsodent is to remove film from teeth. Removing film requires special properties in a tooth paste. Film is a glue-like coating. It clings stubbornly, absorbs stains from food and smoking and makes teeth unattractive. Ordinary ways fail to remove this film as effectively as Pepsodent. Tests have been made that prove this beyond all question.

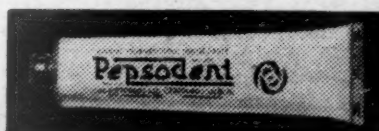

Film contains germs. It holds them against the tooth surface—teeth decay. Removing film is imperative. Eating the right foods and seeing your dentist every six months completes the only sound rule known for safeguarding teeth.

Pepsodent contains no pumice, no harmful grit or crude abrasives. It has a gentle action that protects the delicate enamel. It is completely SAFE for children's as well as adults' teeth.

Get Pepsodent tooth paste today. All through life it will aid your dentist in preventing trouble and retaining lovely, glistening teeth.

MR. KIRBY PAGE, Editor of "The World Tomorrow," who recently sent out a questionnaire to clergymen inquiring their views as to whether they would bear arms in case of future war, requested the Chief of Staff, General Douglas MacArthur, to express an opinion for publication in his paper as to his views upon the result of the replies received from the clergymen.

General MacArthur wrote as follows:

"I appreciate very much the courtesy of the suggestion contained in your note of April 20, and am glad indeed to avail myself of the privilege of commenting on the general subject of the Church in war.

"My predominant feeling with reference to the majority of the replies received by your paper from 19,372 clergymen is that of surprise. Surprise at the knowledge that so many of the clergymen of our country have placed themselves on record as repudiating in advance the constitutional obligations that will fall upon them equally with all other elements of our citizenship in supporting this country in case of need. To exercise privilege without assuming attendant responsibility and obligation is to occupy a position of license, a position apparently sought by men who do not hesitate to avail themselves of the privileges conferred by our democracy upon its citizens, but who in effect proclaim their willingness to see this nation perish rather than partisanship in its defense.

"The question of war and peace is one that rests under our form of government, in Congress. In exercising this authority Congress voices the will of the majority, whose right to rule is the cornerstone upon which our governmental edifice is built. Under the Constitution, its pronouncement on such a question is final, and is obligatory upon every citizen of the United States. That men who wear the cloth of the church should openly defend repudiation of the laws of the land, with the necessary implications and ramifications arising from such a general attitude toward our statutes, seems almost unbelievable. It will certainly hearten every potential or actual criminal and malefactor who either has or contemplates breaking some other law. Anomalous as it seems, it apparently stamps the clergyman as a leading exponent of law violation at individual pleasure.

"I am mindful of the right accorded every American citizen to endeavor by lawful means to secure such changes in the Constitution or statutes as he may desire. But to concede to him the right to defy existing law is to recognize a state of anarchy and the collapse of properly constituted authority. May I remark also that if we acknowledge the prerogative of the individual to disregard the obligations placed upon him by American citizenship, it seems only logical to ask him to forego all rights guaranteed by such citizenship.

"It also surprises me that while apparently entering a plea for freedom of conscience, these clergymen are attempting to dictate to the consciences of those who honestly differ from them over questions of national defense. Their sentiments and implied efforts are injecting the church into the affairs of state and endangering the very principle that they claim to uphold. Perhaps the greatest privilege of our country, which indeed was the genius of its foundation, is religious freedom. Religious freedom, however, can exist only so long as government survives. To render our country helpless would invite destruction, not only of our political and economic freedom, but also of our religion.

"Another surprise comes in the revelation that so many seem to be unfamiliar with the struggle of mankind for the free institutions that we enjoy, Magna Charta, The Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation, the rights of small nations, and other birthrights of this generation have been bought with the high price of hu-

ARMY SPORTS

Army varsity athletes split even in their two big contests last week-end, winning from the University of West Virginia on the track at Morgantown, 63½-62½, and losing at baseball to the University of Maryland at home, 10-3. The plebes won at tennis, from MacKenzie, 6-0, and bowed to Baltimore Poly's lacrosse team, 7-3.

Track

The cadets topped the Mountaineers by a single point in their contest, 63½ to 62½, in their final track and field meet. The Mountaineers had a lead on the scoreboard until Captain Moore and Green of the Army took first and second in the broad jump, the last event.

Three Army athletes set up Mountaineer field records. Graham ran the mile in 4:26 1-10. Lankenau threw the javelin 199 feet and Price put the shot 47 feet, 1 inch. Callaway, West Virginia hurdler and jumper, was the high scorer with 15 points. Out of the 14 first places, the Army took seven and the Mountaineers took seven.

Baseball

The University of Maryland baseball players wasted no time in initiating the defeat of the Cadets, 10-3, when they jumped on the offerings of Humber for four runs in the first inning.

Landry and Coughlin, Humber's successors, fared little better. Humber, who was pitching his last game for the Academy, lasted only two-thirds of an inning, yielding a triple, a double and two singles in the brief time he was in the box.

Maryland later hammered both Coughlin and Landry, while they were backing up McIlwee and Milburn with dets well in hand, allowing them only fine fielding as well as timely hitting. Both Maryland pitchers kept the Cadets seven hits. Maryland collected 17 hits all told, off Army hurlers.

Only four of the cadets hit safely during the game, Powell, Farnsworth, and Golden, who each got two safeties apiece, and Schorr, who got one.

Plebe Lacrosse

Although the young Cadets fought hard and kept the score down, the Poly aggregation of Baltimore had little difficulty in winning at lacrosse, 7-3. Vaughn, of Poly, personally scored five of the visitors' goals, scoring four of them in the first half. Poly led, 5-2, at the end of the half. Reeves played well for the Cadets, but no player other than Vaughn scored more than once.

Plebe Tennis

The MacKenzie School, of Monroe, N. Y., could not offer the plebe tennis team much competition and consequently were whitewashed, the score being 6 to 0.

man suffering and human sacrifice, much of it on the fields of battle.

"I am surprised that men of clear and logical minds confuse defensive warfare with the disease which it alone can cure when all other remedies have failed. Do they not know that police systems and armed national defense are the human agencies made necessary by the deep-seated disease of individual depravity, the menace of personal greed and hatred? Should not these clergymen turn their attention to the individual sinner and rid the country of crime rather than attack the national keepers of the peace, the most potent governmental agency yet devised for this very purpose? It is a distinct disappointment to know that men who are called to wield the sword of the spirit are deluded into believing that the mechanical expedient of disarming men will transform hatred into love, and selfishness into altruism.

"May I also express surprise that some have lost sight of the fact that in none of our past wars have clergymen been required to bear arms, and that under the terms of the Geneva Convention, ratified by the United States in 1907 (Sec. 130 and 132), chaplains are non-combatants and not authorized to be armed. And if United States Army chaplains are ever guilty of using inflammatory propaganda, such activity is without warrant or authority by any statute or order ever promulgated in the history of the country.

"Perhaps I should also remind them that under the terms of the League of Nations the United States would be required to maintain a standing army of

NAVY SPORTS

Navy lost all three of its major meets last week-end, succumbing to the Maryland lacrosse team, 8-1, while Ohio State athletes defeated the Middies both on the baseball diamond and on the track. At the same time the District of Columbia National Guard team was outshooting the Navy on the rifle range, 2,311 to 2,291. The baseball score was Ohio, 10; Navy, 7, and the track, Ohio, 71 2-3 to 54 1-3.

Lacrosse

After a cautious opening, and a period in which play was about equal, Maryland launched a powerful attack that the Middies could not stop and in this half the Terrapins scored four times, while Navy could not get the ball into the net. In the second half, the Marylanders scored four more goals, while Moncure in the same period scored the one goal that saved the Middies from being shut out. This was one of the worst defeats suffered by the Middies on their own field. The game was a feature of the June week exercises.

Baseball

The last baseball game of the season went to the Buckeyes of Ohio State, who, led by their nationally famous three-sport star, Wesley Fesler, collected 12 hits, and took advantage of three Navy errors to win, 10-7. Fesler connected for a home run and two singles out of six trips to the tee.

The visitors piled up a three-run lead in the first and were never headed thereafter. The Middies made their tallies on two spurts, one in the second inning resulting in the scoring of four runs, while the last scoring spree, in the eighth, netted three runs. In their half of the second, the Middies scored four times on a triple by McEachern, a single by Fitzgerald, Ashworth's double, a pass to Coombs and two errors by Fichter. In the eighth, Navy scored on three successive singles and two infield outs. The Navy thus closed its season with a record of 8 wins out of 19 starts, but two of these losses were to the Baltimore Orioles and the Washington Senators, in exhibition games.

Track

The Ohio State track team raced to a 71 2-3 to 54 1-3 victory over Navy, while Hardman of Navy clipped three seconds off the Academy record for the mile. Keller, of Ohio, ran the high hurdles in one-fifth second less than the world's record.

Plebe Lacrosse

The Navy plebes saved the Academy from being totally shut out in the day's contests when they barely nosed out the Maryland freshmen at lacrosse, 4-3. O'Donnell opened the scoring for Navy midway of first half and Condon added another. Navy led 2-1 at the half, both teams being on even terms in the final half.

at least a half million men in order to be able to carry out its mandates. I am curious to know how many of the clergymen who voted for the League have read the Articles and understand that under them the peace of the world is to be maintained in the last analysis, by armed military forces. It is difficult to reconcile the faith of these people in the efficacy of newly organized international agencies to keep the peace and enforce respect for international covenants with their self-confessed intention to violate the existing laws of their own long-established government.

"A few questions occur to me that could appropriately be asked the clergymen who replied to your questionnaire. In stating that they were in favor of the United States taking the lead in reducing armament, even if (Please turn to Page 967)

With the Services in the Nation's Capital

THE past week has been barren of large local events of general interest, but considerable attention was centered on the June Week exercises at Annapolis. This coming week, West Point's June Week will take the center of the stage, and many visitors are expected to attend.

Miss Laura Barkley, daughter of Senator and Mrs. A. W. Barkley, of Kentucky, arrived Wednesday morning to be the guest of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Roderick L. Carmichael and their daughter, Miss Kathleen Carmichael. She came to Washington for the marriage of Miss Catherine Berry to Lieut. Frank Coleman, which will take place Monday. Both Miss Carmichael and Miss Barkley will be bridesmaids.

Miss Clara Bolling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bolling, will entertain at dinner tonight at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of Miss Catherine Berry. Miss Bolling will also be a bridesmaid.

Rear Adm. and Mrs. Mark Bristol entertained at dinner Tuesday evening at the National Women's Club in honor of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams.

Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, retired Surgeon General of the Army, and Mrs. Ireland sailed from New York Wednesday for Europe.

Among those present at the luncheon given Tuesday at the Pan-American Annex in honor of the Minister of Colombia, Dr. Fabio Lozano, by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, were Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, Assistant Secretary of War Frederick H. Payne and the Surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson.

Lieut. Comdr. J. A. Lee, USN, and Mrs. Lee, with their children, are guests of Dr. and Mrs. B. E. Talbott at their home, 3512 Massachusetts Avenue. Comdr. and Mrs. Lee are on their way to Honolulu, where Commander Lee has been transferred for duty.

Hold Up Navy Promotions

necessary. He also stated that the matter was one that Congress should pass upon.

At present, as there are not vacancies enough for the entire 1931 class, the Department is again asking him to rule upon the point. As there were no vacancies for about 180 of the class, and Congress provided that they should be commissioned regardless, it is important to decide whether they are to be carried as extra numbers or not. If the 14,000 trade school men are counted there will be 760 vacancies in the line, and upon the annual redistribution, the excess ensigns would be counted, thus giving each grade additional vacancies.

Before the meeting of the Line Selection Board last month, the Department asked the Department of Justice to decide on the matter, but nothing was done, and so the board met and selected only enough officers to fill vacancies should the decision be refused or rendered adverse to the Navy.

Again during the past week the Navy Department wrote to the Attorney General, explaining the necessity of immediate action, but he has not yet ruled on the matter, and so 300-odd naval officers who had expected to add a half a stripe or so of gold braid on June 4 may not yet do so.

Some word is expected from the Department of Justice within the next week, it is hoped, and the promotions will then become effective. If he refuses to render an opinion or decides against the Navy, the promotions given below will result, to take effect as of June 4. If he decides in favor of the Navy, which is not expected, an undetermined larger number of promotions will take place.

Those who were due to make their number on June 4, and whose promotion is now held up, are:

All of the lieutenant commanders selected for promotion last December who have not yet been promoted and 28 of the officers selected for promotion to commander last month:

Lieutenants (line) from Signal Number 1569 (Lt. V. C. Barringer, Jr.) to Signal Number 1693 (Lt. Clyde Lovelace).

Supply Corps, Signal Numbers 7306 to 7394, inclusive (Lt. H. M. Shaffer through Lt. R. E. Smith).

Medical Corps lieutenants from H. J. Noble through C. R. Tatum, Signal numbers 6356 to 6378, inclusive.

Construction Corps—Signal numbers 7981 (Lt. T. W. Richards) to 7930 (Lt. W. A. Sullivan).

Civil Engineer Corps lieutenants—R. L. McClellan and H. W. Johnson.

Comptroller General Decisions

A-36364. (S) Transportation furnished Navy officers for travel via water in a mileage status.

When transportation is furnished an officer of the Navy over water routes competitive with rail routes and of substantially the same distance, at a cost not to exceed the net cost to the Government to furnish transportation via rail over the official distance, mileage should be computed on the same basis as when transportation is furnished over the official rail route—that is, at 8 cents per mile over the official distance, less three cents a mile, same distance, for transportation furnished; where the net cost to the Government for the steamship transportation is greater the difference between the net cost to the Government of rail and steamship transportation should also be deducted.

In no case of steamship transportation may the total cost to the Government for payment of mileage to the officer and payment of transportation to the carrier exceed what would have been the cost to the Government for these items by the official route.

A-35909. (S) Traveling expenses—Tips—Sea Travel—Army officer.

Reimbursement for tips as for sea travel is not authorized to an officer of the Army performing water travel under orders between points along the southeastern coast of Alaska and river travel in the interior; the tips authorized are limited to those provided in paragraph 11-b-3 of Army Regulations 35-4820.

The tips provided in paragraph 11-b-5 of the regulations for sea travel include tips at meals.

You Can't Bombard D. K. with Big Guns!

Big guns will rout many an enemy attack but D. K. (decay) germs which attack your gums and teeth necessitate another type of weapon and ammunition. Brush your teeth and massage your gums regularly with Forhan's, the scientific dentifrice. Forhan's was originated by a dentist and contains a preparation long used in the treatment of gum disorders. It is recommended by many dentists.

Forhan's is an effective tooth cleanser and its constant use on the gums stimulates blood circulation which helps to keep them in a healthy condition. Men like Forhan's and you will like it too—after you try it. Get a tube at the Commissary, Post Exchange, or Ship's Store.

29th Infantry Notes

THREE HUNDRED members of the National Editorial Association were scheduled to visit Ft. Benning on June 5 to witness a regimental parade by the 29th Infantry and eat their evening meal with Headquarters Company and F. Company. The regiment, outfitted in the new khaki cotton uniform for both officers and men, formed in Doughboy Stadium and immediately following an address of welcome by Brig. Gen. Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, were to present the special 29th Infantry regimental formation for parade in connection with retreat and the evening gun. The stadium at this time of the year is at the highest peak of beauty. The turf is green, the ivy vines have almost completely covered the stadium walls and the hedge of roses bordering the open end of the stadium is in full bloom. The Regimental Coat of Arms were recently repainted and for the occasion of the visit of the editors, the blue and white pennants for each of the regiments were to be flown.

Following the parade the guests, including many women, were to be taken to the parade ground where the 29th, collaborating with the 83rd Field Artillery Battalion and the 2nd Battalion 1st Tank Regiment, produced a military display.

An inspection of the new 29th Infantry barracks and squadrooms was to precede the chicken dinner. The schedule further provided for some speeches and then departure by special train on the journey which was to take the editors on a tour of the State.

New Uniforms

The new issue khaki cotton uniform to be worn for the first time by the 29th Infantry at the parade for the members of the National Editorial Association apparently has solved the problem for uniformity of color and dress for troops stationed where the cotton uniform is worn. It is slightly lighter in color than the so-called "chino" khaki used generally in the Philippines, and presents a rich, silky appearance. In addition the color blends very nicely with the white shirt and collar, as well as the darker shades of cotton and wool shirts. The darker "O. D." chevrons, denoting grade, enhance the attractiveness.

System for Fitting

When the 29th was selected to be the first regiment to receive the new khaki uniform, Col. Duncan K. Major, Jr., the regimental commander, instigated a system of fitting which has brought about very satisfactory results in proper fit for the entire regiment. Of the 2,037 men equipped, only 12 needed special measurement. Only 24 coats and 36 breeches of stock sizes were used. The Tryon method was adopted, unlike the special measurement system used for the woolen service uniform. The success of the plan used by the regiment was further assured by the personal attendance and inspection of the regimental commander, both when the uniforms were tried on and also after they were delivered and issued.

While several methods may be used to guarantee the best possible fit, the experience of the 29th may well be imitated or used to perfect a better scheme. The procedure was as follows:

Coats and breeches were arranged (by sizes and style—short, regular and long for the coats—and waist and in-seam for breeches) on tables in the mess hall. Fitting was done by companies and the individual was called as his name appeared on the company roster. Men came in fatigue pants and O. D. shirt and tie. One non-commissioned officer from Regimental S-4 measured the chest, waist and in-seam. Another "non-com" picked up the proper size of coat, and still another the breeches. A company officer saw to it that garments were properly adjusted on the person. The soldier then placed himself in front of the regimental commander and faced about twice at the colonel's direction. One "non-com" stood by with a rule to measure length of coat with relation to the crotch. Regimental S-4 and the company commander were present and indicated discrepancies. When necessary another coat or breeches was tried on. If special measurement was needed, form used for woolen uniform was made out. If fit was satisfactory or only minor alterations needed, soldier passed on to first sergeant and company clerk, who recorded measurements, appearing on the garment, after the individual's name. Where longer sleeve was needed notation was made on the requisition and in shipping the special length, the Quartermaster depot

FAVORS MacARTHUR BILL

Editor, Army and Navy Journal:
I AM heartily in favor of the MacArthur Promotion Bill.

For many long years I have viewed with increasing distaste the howls of "wolf!" or "injustice!" which have burst from our ranks immediately after the announcement of a proposed bit of well-meant promotion legislation. It is about time for some souls to realize that anything in the way of promotion reform is better than nothing. "Nothing" is what we'll get if we don't soon adopt the policy "If you can't boost, don't knock."

The MacArthur bill is the result of profound study and it probably stands a better chance of becoming a law than any other promotion bill recently devised. For the latter reason alone, the Army should give it ungrudging and unqualified support.

The MacArthur bill adheres to the admirable principle of "no forced elimination." Attrition is a subject which can be taken care of at any time after a major step has been accomplished toward promotion reform. Bigger and better attrition will, of course, oil the workings of whatever promotion system is in force.

Much of the present discontent in the Army can probably be traced down to the fact that an officer with less than 30 years' service is unable to realize on his accumulated equity in retirement pay. Loosely speaking, I understand that if an officer is placed in Class B and his service has been honest and faithful, he gets a retirement pay of 2½ per cent per year of service. This is an acknowledgement, in a way, that an officer does have an equity in retired pay. Why not permit voluntary separations from the service with the same reimbursement? Malcontents would then be able to depart with no hard feelings on either side. Attrition would be improved and the general morale of the Army would be raised immeasurably.

This is a serious suggestion and I hope that some day voluntary separations from the service will be permitted via the 2½ per cent per annum method, but in the meantime—

Here's to the MacArthur bill, may it become a law!

Ft. Douglas March

Ft. Douglas, Utah.—Headed by Col. H. C. Price, regimental commander, the troops of the 38th Infantry left Ft. Douglas at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, June 3, on the first lap of their 124-mile overland march.

A night camp was established a Union Wednesday evening and subsequent camps this week at Point of Mountain, American Fork, and Provo. The column will reach Provo about noon today and will leave that city for Vivian Park on Monday morning.

shipped them in separate package, so that soldier would get proper coat.

When the uniforms were delivered and issued company commanders reported the men to the office of the regimental commander, who again inspected the garments. S-4 and non-commissioned staff were present, as well as man with company record. Men having less than three months to serve on current enlistment were not fitted out.

Few alterations were necessary and company officers of the regiment are extremely gratified over the success of the experiment, not only because of the facility and very satisfactory appearance of their men, but especially for the saving to the individual soldier who heretofore was obliged to spend a considerable amount of his clothing allowance for either a special make uniform or for alterations.

OLD GOLD needs no five-foot shelf of volumes to tell its story. Or even a bigger ad than this. All the space O. G. needs is room enough to say . . . "Try it!" The story is all in the cigarette . . . smoothness, mellowness, throat-ease. OLD GOLD told its own story to thousands of smokers in public concealed name tests . . . and defeated other leading brands. Let a package tell you why!

The new regulations abolish the mate system and the title of sub-lieutenant will hereafter designate the first grade of officers promoted from the lower deck.

Statements made by General Pershing in his book, "My Experiences in the World War," that Germany was guilty of the war are objected to by Gen. Wilhelm Heide, who was chief of the German Army until last October, in an open letter. "If men like Poincaré still talk of Germany's war guilt the world is not impressed any more. But if the chief of the American Army does the same it is dangerous for Germany," the German general said.

Financial Digest

DURING the last few trading days, it has been obvious that stocks whose earning power has been holding up well during all the depression were finally succumbing to liquidation influences, according to information from morning stock letters of E. A. Pierce and Co.

This applies particularly to the food stocks and to the cigarette manufacturing issues. The weakness in those directions, in the absence of evidence to show that their earning power is on the verge of serious decline, would indicate that the wholesale liquidating movement is in the phase where all ideas or thoughts of individual values are swept aside by the impelling necessity or desire to establish liquidity.

The market has not yet indicated in any definite way that with the cessation of urgent selling pressure it has reached a level where it may stabilize itself. Main concern during recent weeks has been largely over the extent of liquidation which would have to be absorbed rather than the current state of business affairs.

Army Motorization

Infantry, there are four regiments in Hawaii which are motorized to the extent of their field and combat trains. They are the 19th, 21st, 27th and 35th Infantry regiments. The condition of the roads in Hawaii make it possible for motor transportation to meet every demand. In the Philippines the 31st Infantry is partially motorized, and in Porto Rico, the 65th Infantry is partially motorized also. It is contemplated that the 16th and 18th Infantry will be partially motorized in the near future.

The Signal Corps is to test a 20-ton Caterpillar tractor, which if suitable, is expected to replace all animal-drawn vehicles in that branch. The Engineer Corps is not contemplating further motorization at the present time, beyond experimental work to determine the most practicable vehicles for their type of work.

The need for modern equipment is felt keenly throughout the Army, as the majority of the present motorization is war stock, which has been in use for 13 or more years. The chief of the Quartermaster Corps, Maj. Gen. J. L. De Witt called attention to this dire need a year ago in a letter to the Adjutant General, when he said, "The War Department is immediately faced with a critical situation with regard to motor transportation."

compelled to make greater proportionate reductions than other countries might be willing to make, did they know that the existing total of our land forces, including Regular Army, National Guard, and Organized Reserves is about one-third of one per cent of our population? Did they know that in other great countries, except Germany, whose army is limited by treaty, this ratio is from three to forty-five times as great? Did they know our total forces in actual size are exceeded by those of at least fifteen other nations, although in population we are exceeded only by Russia, China, and India? Finally, did they consider the words of Our Lord as given in the 21st verse of the 11th chapter of St. Luke: 'When a strong man armed, keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace?'

'In all modesty may I not say to the opponents of national defense that Our Lord, who preached the Sermon on the Mount, later in his career declared: 'Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword.' St. Matthew, 10th chapter, 34th verse. It is my humble belief that the religion which He came to establish is based upon sacrifice, and that men and women who follow in His train are called by it to the defense of certain priceless principles even at the cost of their own lives. And I can think of no principles more high and holy than those for which our national sacrifices have been made in the past. History teaches us that religion and patriotism have always gone hand in hand, while atheism has invariably been accompanied by radicalism, communism, bolshevism, and other enemies of free government.

'Have not those who oppose our modest and reasonable efforts for national defense miscalculated the temper and innate spirit of patriotism in the average American? The fact that our Citizens' Military Training Camps are over-subscribed long before the opening of the camps comforts me that patriotism is still a dominant power in our land. Any organization which opposes the defense of homeland and the principles hallowed by the blood of our ancestors, which sets up internationalism in the place of patriotism, which teaches the passive submission of right to the forces of the predatory strong, cannot prevail against the demonstrated staunchness of our population. I confidently believe that a red-blooded and virile humanity which loves peace devotedly, but is willing to die in the defense of the right, is Christian from center to circumference, and will continue to be dominant in the future as in the past.'

Col. Beadle Wins Suit

'under orders, with troops operating against an enemy, actual or potential.'

Concluding that the character of Colonel Beadle's duty did not fall within this description, the Court rules that he is entitled to rental allowance. It states:

'The National Guard of Nicaragua is declared in the act creating it to be 'an institution foreign to all political influences designed to maintain social order in the triple capacity of an urban, rural, and judicial police force.' The national guard was, during the period in which the plaintiff was its commanding officer, essentially a police organization, the purpose and function of which was to preserve law and order in the Republic. The duties of the plaintiff were administrative in character. He was during the whole period of his service stationed at headquarters in the city of Managua. The only enlisted men or troops of any character attached to his headquarters were orderlies, clerks, and guards. He at no time during the period of his detail engaged in combat, and it is not shown that he at any time operated with any organized forces of the guard in expeditions against bandits and outlaws which then infested parts of the Republic of Nicaragua. His work consisted wholly in instructing and training the personnel of the Nicaraguan National Guard, to the end that it should become an effective and disciplined police force in the maintenance of social order and domestic peace.'

Attorneys John W. Price and Rees B. Gillespie, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C., appeared for Colonel Beadle, Mr. Gillespie making the argument for Colonel Beadle.
